Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Angora Goats: The Wealth of the Wilderness Millions of acres of land in the mountain districts of America and along the great lakes are overgrown with brush and weeds. For ordinary industrial purposes they are worthless. A permanent revenue of even a few cents an acre from this vast territory would add millions, if not billions, to the wealth of the country. A cent a year from a piece of land as large as a city lot does not seem like much money, but on a valuation of a dollar an acre, which is a liberal figure for brush and stumps, it is a greater percentage of profit than is realized from the best improved property in New York City. In building railroads, developing mines, conjuring with electricity and making farming an advanced science, American genius has overlooked primitive opportunities in which nature does most of the necessary work and requires the minimum of capital and experience. The highlands of America are exactly adapted to raising rugged breeds of cattle, sheep and goats, such as inhabit the mountainous regions of the Old World, and constitute the most substantial wealth of Scotland, Turkey and South Africa. Every living creature is an evolution of environment. The highlands of Scotland have developed the famous Cheviot and Blackfaced sheep, which thrive where no other domestic animals can live, and the rugged Galloway hills have given their character and name to a breed of cattle unequalled for hardihood and unexcelled for profit. The barren uplands of Turkey in Asia are the home of the Angora goat, which can subsist on the nearest to nothing of any animal useful to man....
