Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: with the sines and cosines of all angles at intervals of 1 from 45 to 90. METHODS OF VERIFICATION. 124. In calculating the sines and cosine of 1 in Art. 120, we obtained the results correct to ten decimal places; and, in deriving from them the sines and cosines of the remaining angles up to 30, we performed a great number of operations with these original approximate numbers. It is not likely, then, that all our sines and cosines up to 30 will be obtained correct to ten decimal places, and it is important to know to how many places they may be depended upon as accurate. It is also important to be able to verify the work from time to time to ascertain if any error has been made in the calculations, since any mistake made in obtaining the value of one of the functions would be repeated to the end of the work. For this purpose we may compare our results for the angles 15, 18, 22 30 , 30, 36, and 45, calculated in the manner explained, with the sines and cosines of the same angles as derived in Arts. 17, 18, 74, 75, 76, 77. It is also easy, by aid of the formulae of Art. 69, to derive from the functions of 15 the sines and cosines of the angles 7 30 , 3 45 ; from the functions of 18, the sines and cosines of 9, 4 30 , ,;...
